

Net Neutrality is important. Let the internet be free of scrutiny by companies whom of which will restrict access to basic information and place them behind high pay walls.

This information of which could be crucial for our students to have to compete their studies. If internet access is slowed, restricted, and even monopolized then for your average struggling student that assignment might not get done.

Beyond that, the repercussions of turning the internet into a power struggled war zone between internet providers who fight over who can provide better and faster internet for certain sites is immense and barbaric. The internet should be a melting pot for all to enjoy equally.

It may not be a right to own equal and opportunistic access to the internet but in this day and age of technology we depend and thrive on the information highway. From our president down to a child who has just learned to use a computer. What gives these companies a right to take that away?

In closing these are my personal thoughts, presented onto the few from the masses in hopes that my voice will reach you and you take my words into consideration. After all, If it isn't broke, don't try to fix it, you'll only wind up making it worse.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Daniel Jay Glowacki
